Explanations
Hello everyone

Just wanted to wish everyone a wonderful Christmas and a Happy New Year.

In this Europe for us newsletter you will find out different articles written in easy to read.

Hope 2021 is better than 2020 was.

Again from the easy to read editor
Merry Christmas and a happy New Year.
László Bercse is the Chair of the European Platform of Self-Advocates and the Vice-President of Inclusion Europe.

László is also the Co-Chair of the Hungarian organisation ÉFOÉSZ.

During the Corona crisis, persons with intellectual disabilities had to adapt, like everybody else.

Our families had to adapt.

Our service providers had to adapt.

You really have to admire the people with intellectual disabilities, the family members supporting them, the staff in-services.
As a self-advocate, I was able to do a lot of tasks.

I was in contact with other self-advocates across Europe.

This was different for many people with intellectual disabilities in Europe.

Many thousands have faced complete isolation, especially those segregated in residential care institutions.

The pandemic means losing our support networks.

Not being able to see our family and friends.

Not being able to go to work.

In some countries, people were left without support.

Students with intellectual disabilities were left out of school, online classes were not accessible to them.

It was hard to stay connected and working.

Online meetings or calls are not for all people.

Sometimes, we do not have computers or phones to do it.

Sometimes, we do not have internet connections.
Many people with intellectual disabilities have lost their jobs.

Many of us feel that we were left out.

Our needs were often not considered when preparing the measures and solutions.

Information was mostly not accessible to us, provided only in difficult language.

We often could not understand what was going on.

What do we need to do and why?

Many people with intellectual disabilities were denied proper health care when sick with Covid.

Many people with intellectual disabilities died from the Coronavirus.

In England, they died at 3 times higher rate than the general population.
How is it in other countries? Especially where there are a lot of people in residential care institutions?

We don’t know, because other countries do not report this information!

It is important to understand that the bad things happening during the pandemic are not new to us.

The pandemic made existing problems, discrimination and segregation worse.

It made this easier to see – I hope also for the governments.

What needs to be done now?

Governments must learn from these experiences.

They must listen to us when preparing the measures.

Our lives have the same value as everyone else's.

Governments and the European Union must investigate properly the things that happened to people with intellectual disabilities.
How many died? How many died because they did not receive proper medical care?

Governments must provide easy-to-understand information. Some have been doing that, others can learn from their example.

The European Union and national money for economic recovery must reach people with intellectual disabilities and families.

The money must go into support, especially in inclusive education and in employment for people with intellectual disabilities.

The money must go into community-based services.

People with intellectual disabilities must be able to move out of the segregated residential care institutions.
Speech by Commissioner Helena Dalli on the International Day of Persons with Disabilities

On the International Day of Persons with Disabilities
European Commissioner for Equality Helena Dalli said:

This year, we mark the International Day of Persons with Disabilities at hard times with Coronavirus.

While the pandemic has affected us all, people with disabilities were affected even harder.

Also, those living in institutions.

Community services and access to healthcare were harder to organize.

Online schooling and working from home were not always accessible to all.
COVID-19 has bought a lot of barriers that people with intellectual disabilities are facing.

We must remove these barriers.

The European Union is promoting the rights of people with disabilities but there is still a long way to go.

At the beginning of 2021, The European Commission will present the new European Strategy on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities.

The European Commission will shape inclusive societies and they will do their best to continue to help.

The European Disability Strategy 2010-2020 has done a lot of good work but there is still a long way to go.
Ending violence against women and girls with disabilities

Even before COVID-19, women and girls experienced violence.

Women and girls with disabilities make 16% of the total population of women in the European Union and 60% of the overall population of 100 million persons with disabilities.

Data show that women with disabilities are 2 to 5 times more likely to experience violence than other women and girls.

In the European Union, 34% of women with a health problem or a disability have experienced physical or sexual violence by a partner in their lifetime.

Women and girls with disabilities receive limited support due to lack of awareness, accessibility, and reasonable accommodation.

Several policies of the European Commission have the potential to end violence against women and girls with disabilities.
Policies like the Gender Equality Strategy and Strategy for Victims' Rights adopted earlier this year, and the European Disability Strategy to be adopted in 2021.

Effect of Covid-19 on the rights of people with intellectual disabilities and their families

Inclusion Europe published a report about how Covid-19 affected the rights of people with intellectual disabilities and their families.

Read the Covid-19 report.

Inclusion Europe wants people to know what happened to people with intellectual disabilities and their families during the Covid-19 crisis.

The report shows people with intellectual disabilities were segregated and discriminated against once more.
Numbers

Numbers are important to see how Covid-19 changed the lives of persons with intellectual disabilities. For example, to know how many people died in institutions or hospitals.

The European Union and countries need to investigate.

Health

The Covid-19 pandemic showed that accessibility of health and emergency services is bad. Accessing treatment in hospitals was not sure for persons with intellectual disabilities sick.

Sometimes, the medical personnel did not know how to behave with people with intellectual disabilities.

People working in institutions did not have enough protections (masks, gloves).
Institutions

Persons with intellectual disabilities were isolated from their families and friends for months.

They were at high risk of infection.

It is proof that institutionalization is harmful and is a violation of European values and human rights.

Support services and the role of families

Because of lockdown, daycare centre and support services closed.

Many persons with intellectual disabilities got no support.

This had a big impact on families having to take care.

This led to panic and worry for everyone.

Some countries supported to families.

Several countries are letting parents take paid leave so that they can stay home and look after their children.
Education

Schools had to close and be online.

People with intellectual disabilities were left behind, because they did not have support, or the material was not accessible.

When schools reopened, some did not allow children with intellectual disabilities.

Many families were afraid.

Access to information and consultations

Information was not in easy-to-read.

Some people did not understand the situation.

Disability organisations talked to governments to tell them to consult people with intellectual disabilities.
Employment

Because of Covid-19, many people lost their jobs.

The situation was very uncertain.

People with disabilities are afraid to lose their jobs.
EU instruments to foster employment of people with intellectual disabilities

Tim Ghillan works at the European Association of Service Providers for Persons with Disabilities.

Tim talked about employment of people with intellectual disabilities.

People with intellectual disabilities have the right to have a job like everyone else.

People with intellectual disabilities also have the right to get help from their community.

But Tim said that there are barriers that stop people with intellectual disabilities from finding a job.
He presented two important documents that can be used to encourage employment of people with intellectual disabilities:

- The European Disability Strategy
- The European Pilar of Social Rights

Tim said we need to make education, housing and transports more accessible to encourage employment of people with intellectual disabilities.

Mark Bell is Head of the School of Law of Trinity College Dublin.

Mark talked about reasonable accommodation.

He said that employment needs to be made accessible for all people with intellectual disabilities.

Mark gave some examples of reasonable accommodation:

- Employers can provide information in easy to read format
- Employers can provide support to employees with intellectual disabilities
- Employers can adapt the tasks of the job to make sure employees with intellectual disabilities can do the job.

Anouk Van Hoofstadt works at the Antwerp Management School in Belgium.

Anouk talked about employment of people with intellectual disabilities in the regular economy.

Anouk introduced Thibeau who works with her.

Thibeau has an intellectual disability.

Thibeau works at the Antwerp Management School.

Thibeau has made a great impact on the team that he works with.
"We help people with disabilities to live a normal life" - Online meeting with Rytmus

Rytmus is an organisation that supports employment of people with disabilities in Czechia.

In 2019, Rytmus helped 40 people with disabilities to find a job.

How does Rytmus support job seekers with disabilities?

Rytmus organises meetings with people with disabilities where they can share their job preferences.

Rytmus helps people with disabilities creating their CV and answering job offers.

Rytmus uses social media to make first contacts with companies and to publish short articles presenting job seekers profiles and preferences.
Martin Lubojacký said that companies are afraid to employ people with disabilities.

Rytmus meets with companies to learn more about their business and hiring practices.

Rytmus sets up meetings between companies and employees to personalise working conditions.

Jobs must meet preferences and needs of each employee with disability.

Rytmus implements “job shadowing”.

Job seekers can work from 1 to 3 days in the company before starting their new position.

Job seekers can also meet self-advocates that are already working in the company.

Once employees start their new job, Rytmus supports and coaches them during their inclusion in the company.
How employment should be covered in the next EU Disability Strategy?

Soufiane El Amrani

“I have been working at Inclusion Europe for a long time.

I am happy with my job.

But I know not all people with intellectual disabilities have the opportunity to have a job.”

Soufiane El Amrani is the Easy-to-read and Advocacy Officer at Inclusion Europe.

Katarina Ivanković-Knežević

Katarina Ivanković-Knežević works at the Directorate-General for Employment, Social Affairs and Inclusion of the European Commission.
Katarina Ivanković-Knežević presented positive outcomes of the previous EU Disability Strategy:

- In 2018, 110 000 young people with disabilities were supported by the Youth Employment Initiative that help young people to have a job.

- In 2019, the European Commission published a guide presenting good practices of reasonable accommodations put in place by employers.

Katarina Ivanković-Knežević said that a lot of work remains to be done to make sure people with disabilities can have a job.

She presented some priorities about employment for the 2020-2030 EU Disability Strategy:

- The labour market should be accessible for people with disabilities.

- Employment services should work with and for people with disabilities.

- All the Member states of the European Union should recognise the disability of a person the same way.
Haydn Hammersley

Haydn Hammersley works at the European Disability Forum (EDF).

Haydn Hammersley presented some ideas that EDF has about employment for the 2020-2030 EU Disability Strategy.

For example:

- Making sure the workplaces can adapt to the needs of each person with a disability.

- Making sure no people with disability who has a job is paid less than the minimum wage of their country.

Milan Brglez

Milan Brglez is a Member of the European Parliament.

Milan Brglez explained that people with disabilities are at greater risk of poverty and social exclusion.

For Milan Brglez, every law should consider the most vulnerable people of the society.
Milan Brglez explained that the COVID-19 crisis impacted employees with disabilities.

Milan Brglez said that the Member states of the EU must increase their commitment to deal with the discrimination in access to employment.

Bjørn works 16 hours a week and earns a lot of money.

Bjørn said that “when you have a job, you get a social life“.
This year, because of the COVID-19 situation, training for self-advocates was done online.

By doing this we were able to reach more people.

We had 93 registrations for the events and 71 attendees.

The participants were self-advocates and professionals supporting them.

The aim of these online meetings was to collect some ideas on how people were affected by the COVID-19 situation on their ability to advocate for themselves and exercise rights.

We had online events in 7 languages and the participants were from 11 different European countries.
What have we learned that it’s important?

- It is really important to have strong self-advocacy groups. When we have them, they can help to decide on good measures.

- It is also important to teach self-advocates on how to use mobile phones and the internet to stay in touch.

- Governments should involve persons with disabilities and their representative organisations when they think about measures to respond to events like the pandemic.

- It is easier to protect ourselves against the virus and to live an independent life if we have community-based services.

Easy-to-read

Easy to read is information that is written in a simple way so that people with intellectual disabilities can understand.

It is important to use simple words and sentences.

If there are words that are difficult to understand, an explanation is provided.

The text needs to be clear to see, for example, black writing on a white background is good.

It needs to be well-spaced.

Easy-to-read often uses pictures to explain what the text talks about.

Someone with an intellectual disability needs to check the information is easy to understand.

Easy-to-read documents often have this logo, so it is easier to find them.

There are rules on how easy-to-read should be done.

It means to make sure people have access to training so they can learn new skills.

ÉFOÉSZ

ÉFOÉSZ is an association of organisations that care and support the rehabilitation of people with intellectual disability in Hungary.

European Parliament

The European Parliament is a place where important decisions of the European Union are made.

For example: laws.

The Members of the European Parliament (in short, MEPs) make these decisions and speak for all the people who live in the European Union.

Every five years,
the people who live in the European Union vote for their country’s MEPs.

The European Union (in short, EU) is a group of 28 countries.

We call these countries “member states”.

They have joined together to be stronger politically and economically.

Institutions

Institutions are places where people with intellectual disabilities live with other people with intellectual disabilities.

They live apart from other people.

This is what we call “segregated”.

Sometimes this happens against their will.
People who live in institutions have to follow the rules of the institution and cannot decide for themselves.

Intellectual disability

If you have an intellectual disability, that means it is more difficult for you to understand information and learn new skills than it is for other people.

This makes some parts of life harder.

People with intellectual disabilities often need support in learning or at work.

Intellectual disability often starts before you are an adult.

It affects you for your whole life.

There are things that can make life easier for people with intellectual disabilities.

For example, information in easy-to-read language.
