

EU Disability Rights Strategy 2021-2030

The European Commission presented the new 10-year Disability Strategy in March 2021.

The strategy is divided in 8 areas. In each area, the Commission sets:

- Flagship initiatives;
- Other initiatives, such as guidance to Member States;
- Calls to Member States to implement actions in line with the UNCRPD and the disability strategy.

Inclusion Europe wanted to see an ambitious disability strategy with clear targets, fostering change with a concrete impact on the quality of life of people with intellectual disabilities and families, for instance:

1. Address the importance of the right to make decisions;
2. Establish clear targets to end segregation;
3. Address violence against women with intellectual disabilities;
4. Recognise the role of families in fulfilling rights and providing support to their relatives with disabilities;
5. Connect to peoples' experiences and be easier to understand.

With a particular attention throughout the strategy to:

- Children with intellectual disabilities and their families;
- Women with intellectual disabilities;
- People with complex support needs and their families.

We believe there are many areas where the EU can and should implement direct and profound change, for example:

- Employment of people with disabilities in EU services and agencies;
- Education (Erasmus programmes, European schools);
- Accessibility of information and procedures.

“Easy to read is very important information for all people with intellectual disabilities, whether you go see a doctor or need to pay a bill, it should be in easy to read.”

EU Rights

National rules deprive 800 000 EU citizens with disabilities of the right to participate in European Parliament elections justifying on the basis of their disabilities or mental health issues

YEAR	ACTION

GENERAL	Accessibility of European Elections (both as voter and candidate) Democracy Action Plan Compendium on E-voting to address the needs of citizens with disability Citizenship, Equalities, Rights and Values programme Support inclusive democratic participation

It is important that the strategy recognises democratic rights not only as voting rights, but also the right to stand for election.

“Many self-advocates are treated as secondary citizens and are deprived of their right to vote. I hope that the actions in the Strategy will help to change this. It is crucial that during the implementation of the Strategy, the Commission will consider the barriers persons with intellectual disabilities face, for example guardianship.”

László Bercse, Chair of the European Platform of Self-Advocates and Vice-President of Inclusion Europe.

It will be of critical importance to ensure people with intellectual disabilities and family members are properly involved and heard during the work on independent living guidance; people with intellectual disabilities and with complex support needs continue to be neglected in deinstitutionalisation efforts.

“Many persons with intellectual disabilities still depend on institutions, support services and parents. Self-advocates complain that support services and staff still have much control over them. They often do not respect self-advocates’ opinions and wishes. This is because the old ways of thinking, common for institutions, are still present in support services.”

The same applies to employment, especially given its role as not only a source of income but also of social integration.

This area is important for several reasons.

First, to ensure the guarantee of these rights, supported decision-making is of essence.

- Key Elements of a System for Supported Decision-Making
- Safeguards in measures relating to the exercise of legal capacity

To ensure safety, protection and justice, training of practitioners on support needs of people with intellectual disabilities, and education to their rights of people with intellectual disabilities is fundamental. A particular attention should be paid to women with intellectual disabilities victims of violence, including structural violence.

- Violence against women, a study on how women with intellectual disabilities cope with violence they experienced in institutions

For education, the progress towards inclusive education is welcome but no more EU funds should be invested towards segregated education.

“Special schools mostly teach professions that nobody in the open labour market needs. Special schools separate persons with disabilities from their peers with very little opportunities for personal growth and independence in future life.”

Senada Halilčević, former Chair of the European Platform of Self-Advocates and Vice-President of Inclusion Europe.

- Neglect and discrimination. Multiplied. - How Covid-19 affected the rights of people with intellectual disabilities and their families

Lastly, arts, culture sports and leisure: accessible information to enable access to culture and inclusion of people with disabilities' art is elementary.
